Gillien is a consultant with Triad Consulting Group and a Lecturer at Harvard Law School and the Harvard Graduate School of Education. At Harvard, she teaches the negotiation workshop, the Program on Negotiation's negotiation seminar, and continuing education courses for professionals.

Gillien's private sector experience includes teaching negotiation, mediation, and communication workshops for executives across the U.S. Her clients have included Compaq, Eli Lilly, Gap, Deloitte & Touche, First Data, and BMC Software. She is currently working with doctors, administrators and hospital staff at Brigham & Women's Hospital and Massachusetts General Hospital to improve their working relationships, decision-making, and communication skills.

In the public sector, Gillien has mediated discussions among a university administration in crisis; facilitated problem-solving among 30 state-based gun control organizations, and led a long-term collaboration aimed at improving services for victims of sexual assault. She was recently involved in mediating a new contract between the management and musicians at the Portland Symphony in Maine. She has also assisted several local and national non-profit groups with strategic planning and inter-organizational conflict. At The Citadel Military College of South Carolina, she has taught workshops in leadership and conflict resolution to cadets as part of that institution's historic transition to co-education.

She is a graduate of Harvard Law School, the Harvard Graduate School of Education, and Yale University. Before graduate school, she spent two years working and traveling in Asia.

When she is not working, she is busy negotiating with 11-year old twins and an 15-year old son.
